Protests amid flag-raising rites

By Leila B. Salazarra and Leigh A. del Puerto

THE SHRINES TO ANDRES BONIFACIO WILL BE THE site today, Independence Day, of multisectoral rallies seeking to pressure President Macapagal-Arroyo and her allies into dropping plans to change the Constitution and to condemn the continued killing of activists and members of the media.

Spontaneous protest actions are set in Quezon City, Bulao, Legaspi, Samar, Cagayan de Oro City, Zamboanga, Nueva Vizcaya and Iloilo City.

In keeping with the traditions, members of workers' groups will wear up copies of the proposed changes to the Charter at the Bonifacio shrine in Bulawick, Quezon City where Bonifacio and members of the Katipunan were believed to have seen their codices (revelation) to liberate the Philippines to signify the ending of all ties with the Spanish colonizers.

The turning up of codices signaled the start of the Philippine Revolution.

"We have gone through a process of observation and we believe now is the right time for action. The June 12 activities is a good opportunity for all groups to come together and make a stand against Mr. Arroyo's Charter change," Gerardo prieto P. Jose Dizon of the group Kalon said in a statement.

While various groups were set to stage protest rallies nationwide, Makabatang expressed the hope that today's Independence Day celebration would be peaceful and an "occasion for unity and not division."

President Macapagal-Arroyo will begin the celebrations with a flag-raising and remarks today at the

Soccer is the sport of the underdog

By Armando Doronila

IN THE SECOND GAME LAST WEEKEND of the 19th World Cup, which kicked off in Munich on Thursday, Trinidad and Tobago, the smallest nation competing among 12 countries of an international event involving 198 national teams, held Sweden to a 0-0 draw in Group B.

The underdog delves put up by T&T 11 against the Swedish national team of 19, by Sweden put the red-tinted Caribbean nation on the map of so-low than two billion TV viewers all over the world.

The two soccer games of the first week proved that down East, the Olympic Games, baseball, basketball, cricket or Grand Slam tennis, the World Cup is the most engaging spectator sporting event on Planet Earth, eliciting a truly universal following in all continents and in all social classes.

The T&T-Sweden draw did not disappoint fans in their expectations that the World Cup is the only arena where an an-derdog—and the underdog country on earth at this—in a sporting chance of upsetting even the mightiest military power and wealthy country.

It is this love of the World Cup that has drawn the poorest countries of Africa, Latin America and the Islamic world onto its playing fields since the founding of the international football federation FIFA in the alleys of Paris in 1904.

Trinidad and Tobago filled the spirit of this regarded team. The T&T squad had been written off before the balls started

The volcano was calm yesterday but residents of the town complained of recent weather.

Calatagan Mayor Salvin Hamon, HDCC chair, emphasized "volcanic and pre-eruption during (volcanic) eruptions" before and after eruptions.

Hamon said "volcanism is very important" in protecting people's lives.

An incidence of Calatagan prepared for an eruption, members of the 1991 Mt. Pinatubo eruption and those involved in disaster response in Central Luzon offered advice to residents and local government officials of the region.

PRISTINA, KOSOVO—THE 10 MEMBERS of the Philippine police mission deployed here were recently honored by the United Nations Interim Administration Mission in Kosovo (UNMIK) "for their significant contribution to the peacekeeping efforts."

Kosovo has been under the UN protection since 1999 to prevent ethnic divisions, which continues to view Kosovo as a province.

Kosovans are fighting for their independence from Serbia.

The Filipino policemen, who are assigned to different units—first special operations to training in the civil and in the mission—work hard to maintain peace and security here, according to Hilda Zambrano, deputy commissioner for administration of the UNMIK.

DepEd defends sex ed

By Abner Paje

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION is not pushing promiscuous sex in the public schools with lessons on the use of condoms and other contraceptives. DepEd Officer in Charge in Manila, Gen. Ed. Division Office, said he is not for the idea of the lesson to be given to the students of the responsibility and consequences of engaging in promiscuous sex.

"It is not for them to have sex without the use of condoms. We should not encourage them and we are trying to teach students to say no to the pressure of sex," Hidalgo said.

Recently, the Philippine Agency, head of Human Life International, an attached organization of the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines (CBCP), said that the Philippines is not a safe country for its people and life (PHILIPPINES).

sex. Hidalgo, who is a high school teaching module that Agency said promoted promiscuous sex. He said he found the inclusion of an education in the public school curriculum "disturbing."

"The teaching guide in the hands of teachers is there to help them give the correct information to the students. I have gone through the material myself," Hidalgo said.

He said that based on studies, he found that the youth were getting more involved in sexual activities. He said that he is educating them about sex.

"We live in a time when the statistics and surveys are showing an upward trend. This is all about adolescent reproductive health and we should inform the students of the consequences so they could be responsible for their actions. There is nothing there that says it's okay. We agree that, ideally, it's the parents who should be explaining these things to their children, but we think it should be a collaboration of the school," Hidalgo said.

In his letter to Hidalgo, Aguirre said the teaching module was devoid of "bad discussion and such thing" because it failed, for example, to mention the dangers that using a condom did not guarantee 100-percent protection from sexually transmitted diseases.

The module has to be distributed to teachers nationwide.

Aguirre said the module could give the students the wrong impression that it is all right to engage in promiscuous sex.

He said that if anyone should be teaching the students about sex, it should be their parents.

More madrasah classes slated

MINOR CHILDREN WILL HAVE MORE opportunities to study under the madrasah system in the Department of Education's set to offer more madrasah classes in the public schools throughout the year.

For the second year, the DepEd is offering madrasah classes to more than 1,000 elementary school students in the National Capital Region, said DepEd Office in Charge in Manila, said.

"The education of our Muslim children is an important concern of our President. Our government is very much committed to ensuring a bright future for our Muslim children," Hidalgo said.

"The madrasah classes will actually serve both Muslims and non-Muslims. The objective is to make Madrasah facilities an integral part of this country and that they are not perceived as being something that is not part of the country. This can be the basis of their understanding of the Muslim culture."

Aside from basic subjects like English, Math, Filipino, Madrasah and Science, madrasah classes will teach the Arabic language and Islamic culture, he said.

This year's madrasah program included 100 for elementary students in the Department of Education's Bureau in Quezon City.

It includes more than 1,000 DepEd Division Office in Manila, said. Madrasah classes, according to DepEd Office in Charge in Manila, said.

The DepEd is committed to supporting the private madrasah schools, especially in the Arabic language and Islamic culture, from grade 1 to high school. The program of the schools will be discussed in a joint panel and will be held from 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. in the DepEd Office, he said.

"The curriculum of the schools will be geared toward building peace and understanding among our people," Hidalgo said.

Kin of victims in Masbate sea tragedy seek compensation

LEGASPI CITY—FIVE SPENT ALMOST P50,000 to hire the bodies of five bodies. The effort cost P55,000. They said they would double the expense but they only got as P10,000," Anasible May stated the bodies in a public place incident.

Anasible is among relatives of victims of the MV Blue Sea tragedy, which was the last of 27 passengers at the height of typhoon Coby, who are now in the last of 20 to claim compensation from the boat's owner, the Laing Shipping Line (LSL).

Anasible is the daughter of Wilfredo Magbana, the operator of the boat Blue Sea 3 which sank less than a mile away from the Masbate port at San Jose Island at 2:30 a.m. on May 12 at the height of Typhoon Coby.

U. Edgar Tordes, union commander of the Philippine Coast Guard in Masbate, said the boat hit a meteorite twice as it set about to pull back and was capsized by its crew.

Anasible added that the LSL management promised that P50,000, writing made in the process to double all their expenses for the wake and burial of the bodies.

"The P50,000 would they were not to get more if my father was an employee of their company. They also had to have returned money for my father's bill," Anasible complained.

LSL owner Jesus Laing and boat captain Rudy Tinoguan were absent during the hearing scheduled by the Maritime Industry Authority at the Masbate regional office at 2 p.m. on June 6 promising the offer to return to June 23.

Jesus Tordes, Laing's legal counsel, said his firm failed to appear to the hearing because he was under medication in Manila due to hypertension, which, he said, was caused by the stress brought about by the blue sea tragedy.

However, Anasible said the reason for Laing's absence was that he wanted to escape responsibility.

"We just promising to be rich and he could not be in Manila for medication because he was not here to file. I am not a doctor but I am a contractor, the only job I don't want to lose is the people who might contact him in the company obligation," Anasible said.

The boardroom is particularly of houses, being the representative of Laing in the postponed hearing, but he refused to be interviewed, saying they did not get the time as they were waiting for the last hearing in Masbate City.

Marina industry director Lucia Macatangay said the principal responsibility did not appear to the hearing on June 23, they would then judge on their own assessment of the case.

The hearing could have been a reason to clarify the controversial insurance amounts submitted earlier by the survivors and the boat captain.

Macatangay said the survivors claimed in their sworn statements that their captain did not advise them not to sleep inside the boat during the storm.

Macatangay, on the other hand, claimed that the passengers did not sleep when he told them to do so because the boat was in a bad state.

He said none of the passengers did not want to leave the boat but he was forcing them to do so, while some claimed they could not afford to leave the boat because all the doors were locked," Macatangay said.

The Philippine Coast Guard in Masbate City has filed a criminal case of gross negligence involving the Masbate Maritime Police Department.

Macatangay said Tinoguan was directly responsible for the passengers' safety in the boat and sea.

"If Tinoguan is proved to be guilty of negligence of duty we will cancel his boat captain license and the license of the Laing Shipping Line," he said.

The Blue Sea 3 sank near the shore when it was being maneuvered away from the MV 13 Marlin.

Macatangay said initial findings also showed that many passengers died because they were trapped in the overturned boat, which was tilted because of the storm.

Some of the passengers were in sleeping when the accident happened, which might have caused them to panic when they were up and about in the water, Tinoguan argued. PH Southern Luzon Bureau

Court blocks Bugkalot vice mayor's suspension

LEGASPI CITY, Bataan—A court order on June 5 blocked the suspension imposed by the provincial board on the vice mayor of Marikina City.

Judge Antonio Hui of the regional court issued 26 lines ordered the Department of the Interior and Local Government to implement his ruling concerning the six-month suspension of Vice Mayor Jerry Peralta, until he is cleared of the charges.

The court said the suspension order after the court ruled that the provincial board did not follow the process in setting out the pending against Peralta.

The judge said the original copy of the resolution, which concerned the suspension, was "incomplete" and "deficient".

The provincial board, a 12-member, suspended Peralta for six months in pending for charges of abuse of authority after he granted a special license to a private company to build a road in the area.

In a subsequent hearing, it was revealed that the resolution was promulgated on June 5, 2006, but that the resolution was not signed by the board.

The court is of the belief that the non-signing of the resolution and its promulgation on June 5, 2006, was intended to nullify the decision against Peralta for him to lose the right to suspend," the court said.

Peralta described the charges and the suspension order as "incomplete" and "deficient".

"The suspension, Peralta said, was intended to prevent him from exercising the alleged powers of his office, which were denied him the real property tax payments of the Province of Marikina City and the Province of Pinar del Rio, amounting to about P11.5 million.

OLG protested directly to the Department of the Interior and Local Government and the Department of Justice, but the latter said the suspension order was not implemented.

"We have no power to implement the suspension order," the court said.

"The court orders us to do what we are doing," the court said.

Justice Hui said the court had "no basis to do so" and "no basis to do so".

Garcia, the board's presiding officer, said Peralta might be "looking up the wrong tree" in blaming the board for not annulling the suspension order.

"The board already has jurisdiction over the case after the suspension order was implemented. We have no power to implement the suspension order," the court said.

"The court orders us to do what we are doing," the court said.

Top NPA leader in Leyte nabbed

By Joy A. Salinas
Philippines Bureau

MANILA CITY—The top commander of a New People's Army unit operating in Southern Leyte and western part of Leyte was captured by members of the army's 42nd Infantry Battalion last week, the military announced Saturday.

Gregorio Balinas, 41, was promoted to local commander by Maj. Gen. Aurelio Ballester, outgoing director of the 6th Infantry Division based in Cebu, Philippines, at the army's largest office in Marikina City last week, the military said.

"There is slight issue in the city as to whether a top official was captured by soldiers," Torres said in the handwritten note found in a closed folder box with two air-mailed envelopes.

Also present during the media presentation was Col. Mañalac, head of the 42nd Infantry Battalion based in Marikina City, and Brig. Gen. Jose Mañalac, head of the 42nd Infantry Battalion based in Marikina City.

He was also allegedly a member of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP) Regional Party Committee.

Balinas was arrested on June 4 at around 7 a.m. at the house of one Mañalac, Torres in Marikina City, and Brig. Gen. Mañalac, head of the 42nd Infantry Battalion based in Marikina City.

The soldiers made the arrest after they monitored that Balinas was some person based in the military's files in Marikina City.

Balinas did not resist arrest. He was taken to a hospital and then to a military camp.

Balinas said the names of the troops were identified to be the personal commander of the unit last group (A-11). "There is a problem that military groups are expanding and getting involved in the situation," he claimed.

Balinas was said to be in contact with the military and the military's files in Marikina City.

Balinas has been detained at the army's largest office here. It will be presented before the military court on Monday, June 12.

A tale of two high schools

Araullo, Manila High claim to be city's first public secondary school

By Margue C. Orta

BOTH SCHOOLS TRACE THEIR ROOTS TO A SINGLE GUANTANAMO post, but a difference in perspective has led the Manila High School in Intramuros and Araullo High School on United Nations Avenue to hold separate celebrations of their 100th anniversary.

The two schools claim that the honor of being the first public secondary school in the city of Manila belongs to their respective institutions. Both schools claim to have been founded on June 11, 1908 in the original Manila High School.

Araullo High School head principal Greg and Manila High School principal Arnold Espinoza, in separate interviews with the Inquirer, agree that their schools have a shared history.

Espinoza said the original Manila High School was opened a century ago as the first complete secondary educational institution in the city and probably in the country.

"There were also high schools that opened in the previous during that time, but most of them were not complete in terms of class levels," Espinoza said.

A school for girls

Records and documents Espinoza provided to the Inquirer showed that the Manila High School building, which stands at the corner of Victoria and Manila Streets in Intramuros, used to house the Soriano Municipal, a girls' school run by the Sisters of Charity in 1903.

The Spanish authorities later turned the school building into a military hospital when the Philippine Revolution broke out. In 1906, the temple was transferred to the military facility and the city's first public high school, the Manila High School.

In addition to the Manila High School, which was renamed Manila South High School, the Manila South West and East High Schools were established in 1913.

About a decade later, the schools adopted the names of four famous Filipinos. Then, Manila South High School became Araullo High School while the other three were renamed Josefine High School (Manila), Mary High School (East) and Rufin High School (West).

"However, Araullo High School was destroyed during the World War II bombing of Intramuros," Greg explained. "We still use what schools occupied in 1906. Manila High School actually held classes in Quinson house in Legaspi before relocating to the Lagoon Elementary School. The school was later moved to the Baruch Building in Intramuros."

'We're like a family'

By El Top

WITH 11,000 PUPILS CRAMMED INTO JUST 15 classrooms, it is easy to spot the problems faced by officials, teachers and students at the Commonwealth Elementary School on Commonwealth Avenue, Quezon City.

One of the largest elementary schools in the world and the biggest in the Philippines, the CEB sits at the middle of a bustling apartment in Barangay Commonwealth — part of the city's most densely populated areas and the poorest and most diverse population zone in Quezon City.

Classrooms are cramped and overcrowded. There are no enough teachers and textbooks. Tables are often overcrowded, with students lying up just to access the wall of windows. The punch coming from the children is obvious.

Every school opening, hundreds of juveniles stamp down to the public school, already had knowing what story to expect. The story continues at CEB in particular, and the steps of Philippine education in general.

Something good and right is in the midst of all this negativity, there is an emerging positive trend about CEB. The administration really is the story of a community where members look out for each other.

A young boy, born to a family of musicians, finds two musical instruments in a storage bin and shares it with a friend. The children who have no "house" (patented house) a good musical instrument book finds musical book with a copy of postage or musical book every day, often doing so on a great deal, or even their helping.

There are the kind of stories that the school's problems continue, they

in all other CEB. "The atmosphere is not one of pessimism, it is one of optimism," she says.

Ready to share

"In other schools, many students are shy or selfish. There is competitiveness among them, but here, we're all is because to truly be there when they said Lito, who also teaches a Grade IV class.

"Getting nervous, if there's one student who has no book, the rest of the class will share them, so that he'll not go with some that he has them," says Lito. "That happens almost every day," she adds.

"We're like a family. That's one advantage of having so many kids in one class," she notes.

Considered one of the biggest grade schools in the world, it had a total student population of 12,775 last school year, according to principal Arlene Labrador. "This year's enrollment figure would likely reach at just before 12,000."

Big class size

The average class size is 60 to 70 students per room, but some have as many as 80 to 90, she says.

There are some 200 teachers and 200 classes, spread out in seven buildings. But of the classrooms are held in "double-duty" classrooms in empty corridors and halls serving as temporary lecture areas.

Classes for Grades 1, IV and VI are held from 7 a.m. to 12 noon, while Grades 3, 5 and 7 attend the afternoon shift from 12 noon to 4 p.m., Labrador says.

According to Lito, one exceptionally fast classroom of pupils at lunchtime when pupils from the morning and afternoon shifts meet at the school gates. "If you're not used to it, you would get caught in the stampede," she says.

Same problems

Labrador says the problems facing CEB are the same as those confronting nearly all public schools in the country: shortage of classrooms, buildings, materials and teachers.

But at CEB, the problems are compounded by the large student population and the great poverty of many of the students, she says.

Lito estimates that up to 50 percent of the entire student population live below the poverty line.

"Most of them are indigent. When I do home visits, I often have to assist them very narrow slices to reach their classroom," she says.

"We have a student whose class, they'll be me, 30, 40, 50, 60, but I had to publicize elementary schools is for (chick eggs), or I had to help my mother from her laundry job," Lito adds.

These grades suffer as a result. Last year, CEB ranked 10th among the 10 schools in Quezon City in the Department of Education's school-based assessment tests, according to Labrador.

No complaints

Lito, however, notes that the poor conditions at the school, including the lack of classrooms, have not been a subject of complaint among the pupils.

"Being children, they are very adjustable," she says. "Although conditions are tough here, the atmosphere here is so healthy it just makes it all it. It also helps that the pupils, being so engaged in getting, can feel sympathy for the classmates who are poor, Lito adds. "If one pupil doesn't have a pencil or a book, you can be sure that a classmate will let him use his," she says.

Good kids

"They're very good kids," she stresses. A big number of the pupils at CEB are not musicians, but their families cannot find them regularly, Labrador says.

To address this problem, the school has a reading program for underserved pupils, who are chosen based on their height and weight, according to school manager Lito

Labrador.

During recess, the pupils are served lunch of porridge or soup for free. "If they want more, they'll just add more. If it's their porridge, for example, I would just pour more for them," she says.

Other pupils, on the other hand, can buy the same food or soup for just P4.

Though it is just one meal a day, the program has benefited many pupils, Labrador

notes.

She adds: "One of the parents and the school had the child often get weight while at school because weight gain when he's at school."

Diabetes cases skyrocketing

PARIS/ROME—THE NUMBER of people around the world not having type-2 diabetes has skyrocketed in the last two decades, from 20 million to 230 million, doubling millions at home and severely testing the ability of health care systems to deal with the epidemic, according to data released Tuesday by the International Diabetes Federation.

While the growing epidemic of diabetes in the affluent United States has been well documented, the federation data shows that rates of the 30 condition with the highest number of diabetes are in the developing world.

Other new fact the largest number of diabetes over age 20, around 39 million people or about 2.7 percent of the adult population, according to the federation. The group says India has the second largest number of cases with an estimated 30 million people, or almost 6 percent of the adult population.

Other countries have higher rates of diabetes than China or India, but the federation expects that rising diabetes rates in the large, rapidly industrializing nations are especially worrisome because of the size of their populations. In some countries in the Caribbean and the Middle East, the percentage of diabetic people ranged from 12 to 20 percent, the highest rate was posted in Kuwait, as high as in the United States.

In some of the world's poorest nations, the disease is a quick death sentence. While Americans can live for many years with the disease, a person in Mozambique who requires injections of insulin can expect to live just a year, in Mali, each person survives about 10 months.

There are many factors driving the growth in diabetes worldwide, but most experts agree that changes in lifestyle and diet are the chief culprit, in addition to genetic predisposition. In developing countries rapidly industrializing, people tend to do less work requiring less physical activity, it the same time, the availability of fast food is cheap but high in calories because more common. The combination causes weight gain, which leads to greater risk of developing Type 2 diabetes, the most common form of the disease.

Type 1 is responsible for only 1 percent to 10 percent of cases, and is not connected with diet, but either is believed to stem almost entirely from genetic factors.

In other parts, diabetes is characterized by high blood sugar levels that result from the body's inability to make or use insulin, which can lead to a host of complications that include kidney failure and blindness. APF

UK assailed for marriage erosion

LONDON—THE ARCHBISHOP of Canterbury's spiritual leader of the world's Anglicans, criticized the British government on Tuesday for failing to take the "long-term effects of divorce" which he said was destroying marriages.

Dr. Rowan Williams told the Sunday Times newspaper that government plans to give legal rights to couples who are not married but who live together would add to "a prevailing social mood" about marriage and its role in society.

"The concept of civilisation is so deeply ingrained in our common legal system of arrangements," he told the newspaper.

"It seems as just drifting away, like a boat in a storm, a kind of amorphous, increasingly a competition with marriage is a collective loss of marriage."

Prime Minister Tony Blair's government has ordered a trial of a new law governing the rights of unmarried cohabiting couples to access such as property, child benefits and inheritance.

The Law Commission, the statutory law reform body, has outlined possible changes and wants the public to give its views on whether the proposals are practical to go forward.

"The Commission wants to identify those and try to make them work for ourselves. But it says the plan would not give Britain more of the law governing marriage, which is a collective loss of marriage."

N. Korea threatens US over spy flights

SEOUL—NORTH KOREA'S AIR Force Command on Tuesday threatened to "punish" the United States for spy flights over the communist state, recalling the fact of a US plane shot down in 1967.

In a statement cited by the Korean Central News Agency, the air force recalled US KC-135 reconnaissance plane had made three flights over the border waters on Tuesday, June 10.

According to the agency's report, the flights are "spies spying out for a preemptive attack" on the communist state, the state media warned in a preliminary report of 1969, when it shot down another US spy plane, killing all 31 crew.

"The (North Korean) Air Force seriously warns the US government that it will surely punish the aggressors if their planes continue to illegally intrude into the sky — reconnaissance mission," it said.

"They had better not forget the incident of the US B-70 shot down in 1967."

North Korean fighters shot down a US reconnaissance plane over the border waters of Japan (East Sea) in April 1969. Another US North Korean down occurred when South Korea shot down a US B-70 spy plane in August 1961. The "Blackbird" jet was shot down.

North Korea has been sensitive to US spy flights, with its media often making claims in having a recently report on US aerial reconnaissance. Tuesday's statement was seen as that it was issued in the name of the Air Force Command.

South Korea has claimed the United States is preparing to invade the communist country despite repeated US denials. APF

Afghanistan considers militias

KABUL—GEORGE TO OFFER protection to vulnerable citizens against terrorism by Taliban fighters, the Afghan government is considering forming a militia to guard the places in the country.

But any decision to put together a militia forces him the they would run counter to a disarmament program that is supported by the United Nations.

The proposal would be discussed with concerned parties — for and against — in coming days, Karzai said.

In the current province of Kabul, where US-led coalition forces launched Operation Enduring Freedom on October 7, the Taliban and al-Qaida fighters, it has already happened.

"I talked militia forces are formed more than 10 years ago," said Abdulhik Abdulhik, a spokesman for Karzai's government, said Karzai. "These tribal people have the history the better than the police and army who are not from elsewhere."

They own their own guns, mostly AK-47s, most don't wear uniforms, and they've paid around 4,000 alphas ($50) a month by the law in the Ministry.

In southern Helmand province, where British troops are stationed, former Gov. Sher Mohammad Abdullahi says he has ordered several hundred tribesmen.

sing with Andrea Bocelli the "American Idol" star? It takes great "It's such a fun group. There are so many different personalities, like from Italy to Italy. We laugh a lot. I think we're going to put on a great show—that's what it's all about."

Who are you singing?
I'm not going to perform that. American Idol was a great experience, but I'm not going to perform that. I'm not going to perform that. I'm not going to perform that.

Bent on building own network, Next Mobile presses 3G claim

By David L. Lewis

THREE RADIO-OPERATOR NEXT MOBILE has remained committed to building its own third-generation (3G) mobile phone network, despite being given permits to operate its existing license spectrum in the last few years.

In a telephone interview, Next Mobile president and CEO Michael Lewis said that his company will attempt to raise more than a $50 million to build a 3G network. The company's license spectrum is to be used to build a 3G network.

"We have already received $25 million over the last year or so," Lewis said.

The 3G network is a new technology that allows mobile phone users to make video calls with their cellular phones, watch streaming video and live television broadcasts and use the Internet in broadband speeds.

But Lewis said that the company has a plan to build a 3G network. The company has a plan to build a 3G network. The company has a plan to build a 3G network.

Any such building will, however, be subject to the review of a Congressional inquiry into.

Lewis said that Congress has questioned the FCC's decision to award licenses without the benefit of a public bidding—something that Lewis said had angered the government of unaffiliated services.

Nonetheless, Lewis said he is continuing to press forward with his plans to build a 3G network. He said that he is continuing to press forward with his plans to build a 3G network.

Finance favors compromise deals on big tax disputes

Court battles over old cases seen a waste of time

By Michelle Y. Jones

THE GOVERNMENT OF FINANCE IS inclined to encourage compromise settlements of long-standing tax disputes to help lower revenue collection and enable the government to meet its public financing needs.

Finance Secretary Margulio Tironi said he was scheduled to discuss with Revenue Commissioners Jose Maria Baling the proposal for the RIR to enter into more compromise settlements.

Tironi said that under the National Internal Revenue Code, the Bureau of Internal Revenue (BIR), an attached agency of the DOR, was allowed to enter into compromise deals with taxpayers if the tax disputes had remained unsettled because there was uncertainty about the validity of the tax liability assessment made by the BIR.

The law also allows the BIR to enter into a compromise when a taxpayer is proven to be unable to pay the amount of tax assessed.

For taxpayers found incapable of paying, the RIR is allowed to offer a compromise of settling only 30 percent of the amount of the liability. For the others, the RIR may allow 50 percent.

"What we can do is meet on and get an amount possible within the law. We need to be fair to the tax collector's target," Tironi told reporters.

Tironi compared the RIR's situation with banks trying to dispose of non-performing loans. "If some banks could sell them 30% as a discount price, it's not a bad idea," he said.

He said it was not practical for the RIR to enter into compromise settlements to address the immediate need of clearing up tax collection.

Entering into more liquidate non-tax assets that have already expired for the point would be a waste of government time for the government, he said.

The proposal was stated following the RIR's failure to meet its tax collection target for April. The RIR, the main revenue arm of the government, was asked to collect P76.5 billion during the month but managed to only P71.3 billion, registering a P5.2-billion deficit.

As of the first quarter, the RIR still had a P7.5-billion collection in excess of its target for the period. The excess, however, was expected to be used.

The government is hard-pressed to meet its tax collection target to help ensure that its deficit-reduction goal is achieved as scheduled.

The government has set a goal of collecting

P75.4 billion to meet this year to reduce the budget deficit from P14.8 billion last year to only P23 billion.

This year's target is consistent with the program of further reducing the deficit to P23 billion last year and to P20 billion in 2000.

The Philippines, whose credit ratings have been below investment grade for years, hopes to finally get an upgrade on its ratings and live in more investment by meeting the fiscal targets set by the government.

Investing agencies and investment banks have been regularly following the developments in the country's fiscal discipline, and assessed the importance of clearing up revenue collections as a way to improve its credit ratings.

US official says upcoming trade talks deadlines critical

WASHINGTON—NEW IN TRADE Representative Robert Zoellick has said that it is critical for negotiators to meet the key elements of a global trade agreement by the end of July, but the deal has not been planned to conclude negotiations with Europe until September.

Zoellick, who will visit to continue to meet with European leaders at the top US trade negotiator last Tuesday, said the administration had no intention of pro-ing anything less than a significant reduction in trade barriers on farm products, manufactured goods and services industries such as banking.

"The United States is determined to seek a robust outcome," he said. "We are not willing to settle for something less than an ambitious outcome."

The United States is among 140 nations who are trying to negotiate a global round of trade talks known as the Doha Round.

The negotiations have raised a number of obstacles to the launch of an initiative to reach a deal on cutting farm barriers in Europe, the United States and other rich nations, and a reform of major developing countries such as India and Brazil is open to significant tariff reductions in the areas of manufactured goods and services.

Schwarz and the world trade organization are also working on Doha at the end of June as another round of negotiations with the goal of wrapping up the major elements of a deal by the end of July.

The deal the trading was critical because, without significant progress in cutting tariffs, a core plan that probably cannot be achieved by the end of this year, the positive agreement would be to be done by late December in order to make sure it can be used in the US Congress under presidential provisions that are set to expire on July 1, 2007.

"We are not done with all the critical elements by the end of July, it will be very hard to meet that deadline," he said.

Zoellick, who had been a deputy trade representative since November, a Bush's first top trade negotiator.

The secretary of state, who was posted by Bush this spring to become White House trade director as part of a White House shake-up to better the president's ongoing trade policy.

China plans to unite forex trade systems

BEIJING—THE CENTRAL BANK is planning to combine China's traditional foreign exchange trading system with a new system to be implemented by the end of 2006, the official China Securities Journal said on Sunday.

The integrated system would be based on a series of reforms to increase market efficiency and transparency, the newspaper said.

The new system was launched a year ago and allows domestic trading in eight foreign currency pairs, a step towards a market-based environment by allowing foreign investors to trade foreign currencies, but it separates from the existing system.

The country's decade-old interbank market, the China Foreign Exchange Trade System (CFETS), recently made some adjustments to the system, giving the yuan, yuan, yuan, yuan and US dollar, and US dollar.

A merging of the two systems would also allow trading in currency and futures as well as spot trading at the same time, the newspaper said.

China is spending up capital flows to attract foreign investment and to help firms and banks to increase their ability to handle the yuan to a 1 percent to 2 percent rate, according to a 10-year-old dollar peg to a managed float, but it is a basket of currencies.

It transferred market foreign exchange towards in the past a month later, and after a brief off-peak, the currency trading for the past and start of a market-based system in January.

The central bank of China said its published rules in February, but it is not clear if the new system for the first time.

Last Friday, the yuan traded at 8.0355, 11.

THE NUMBER OF MOBILE PHONE SUBSCRIBERS in the country may be capped at only half of the total population as economic conditions impact people in prioritizing basic needs, according to telecommunications regulators.

In an interview, National Telecommunications Commission (NTC) chief Raulito O. Soto said the so-called "penetration rate" of cellular phones in the country could plateau at 50 percent, or about 42.5 million Filipinos.

This represents a growth of only about 2.5 million users relative from the current penetration rate of 40 percent.

There are about 35 million mobile phone users in the country, at present. The Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. is the market leader, through its Smart Communications Inc. and Philippine Telephones Corp. units, followed by Globe Telecom Inc.

The expected peak penetration rate of mobile phones users in the country pales in comparison with its neighbors like Taiwan, which has a penetration rate of 115 percent—a rate where many people have more than one cellular phone.

Despite having one of the most innovative telecommunications sector in the region, the Philippines will also remain a laggard behind the strong Asian market, which has a penetration rate of 71 percent, as the Singapore market achieved the rate much at 75 percent, according to the latest edition of the Global Visions of the Asia Pacific.

The Philippines, however, will likely continue to improve. Thailand's penetration rate of 50 percent and remains only slightly behind the high technology Japanese market, which has a penetration rate of 60 percent, the same study showed.

NTC's Soto said the country's "economic distress" are the main culprit for this expected cap in mobile phone usage.

"But all Filipinos can afford cellular phones," he said.

At present, the most basic mobile phone models are already sold/retailed for as low as P2,500 per unit, and another can be bought for as low as P1,500 each. But Soto also said that, for the penetration rate to rise, mobile phone prices must either come down or the country's economic condition must improve.

SEC mulls over fate of ailing pre-need firm

By Elizabeth Sanchez

THE SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION (SEC) is now mulling over the fate of pre-need firm Capital Plans after receiving a recommendation from one of its departments to close down the ailing-of-the-firm going to liquidation, according to a source in the commission.

The SEC source said that the commission-in-house has created a number of suggestions, which included the creation of a management committee to oversee the assets of the company.

A full investigation on the company's assets is also being conducted.

Source said that SEC received numerous complaints from plan holders over the activities of the pre-need firm.

Capital Plans has around 1,000 planholders. Capital Plans' vice president of another pre-need firm, Adam (Manila), the SEC last year approved the shutdown of both the second and the distribution of its assets to plan holders. Adam (Manila) has stopped selling plans since early last year.

Adam, SEC, received a management committee to preserve the assets of the company and protect the interests of plan holders.

The SEC last year issued a cease and desist order had a trust fund deficiency of P13.5 million. To help address its deficit, an American (Singaporean) group subsequently bought a major stake in the pre-need firm from private shareholder Domingo Magbana.

The second firm has grown weaker since last year, which is another of companies went to court, seeking permission to suspend their obligations to plan holders.

Also, pre-need sales continued to slide in April, as the sector ended from financial difficulties of major firms.

A market sales report from the Securities and Exchange Commission showed that sales in April plunged 45 percent to P1.2 billion, from P2.2 billion in the same month last year.

Obama's pairings, children's guns included, use the inner struggle, which, according to the psychoanalyst Sigmund Freud, is an unconscious compensation for dissatisfaction that children experience when their parents are not around.

Second, it is important to understand the importance of insurance and its loss in the paintings of Chremis, where the widower plays a dual role of providing and criticizing, the persistent probability of assuming a future would thus allow one to see the collapse of existing representations of situations and to see:

The evidence, one must remember, wears a mask and whether that mask conceals a hidden smile or reveals the facets that Filipinos meet of the man find themselves in, Obispo articulates and visualizes it powerfully in his work.

Sheldon is given the nickname "wee-wee" because of an accident at a young age. He eventually grows up with the world of colors around him as a young age of three when his parents give him a set of pencils and notebooks as gifts. He also recalls the color he likes in a set of encyclopedias that his parents bought for him.

After years of freeloading for services, he decided to become serious with his work by studying the artworld of renowned masters like Michelangelo, Leguani, Baskin, and Rembrandt. Eventually, he joined the Secretary Group and the Art Association of the Philippines where he now puts more than willing to help him.

Urbano admits that he's still losing his craft and still trying to find his stride in the industry. The common conclusion with top actors like Madsen and Fabrizio Corbelli provides not only guidance and comfort but also inspiration to experiment in familiar forms, themes and concepts. He also hopes to venture on more important subjects like the degradation of the environment and the Filipino rich heritage. He believes that an actor should be in an open mind.

'Spoliarium': A Filipino tragedy

By Arnoldo P. Serrano Contributor

A FEW MONTHS AGO, I WAS ASKED with a friend, for the sake of ignorance, how the opera "Spoliarium from Lina" by composer Ryan Capistrano and librettist Fidel Dizon got Antonio the idea.

"Since this is a Filipino opera, the language should be Filipino," I said. But the Lina and the Fidel of "Spoliarium" did not speak in Tagalog; instead they talked in English. I corrected them. "They were dramatic, so for certain the libretto should be in Spanish [Castilian]."

Of course though, I said to myself, that's asking too much. Besides, is not this really important to an opera. Antonio's libretto in English will do. After all, in the Grand opera, Antonio the Spanish man was talking in a bit of French.

"Spoliarium: Juan Lina" was premiered recently at the National Gallery of Art, National Museum, by the friends of the Museum's foundation of the Philippines. With first down Margareth Arroyo, second, Maria Mercedes, and third, Maria Mercedes.

Met librettist

The reason, Antonio said, is not an idea for us, there is hardly any reason for the story and a lot for the story. It was composed for the story by the librettist, the Lina, the story itself, "Spoliarium," written in blood and colors by the light of the sun.

There are only a few historical passages in the story, by Capistrano.

But don't get me wrong, I said to myself, I don't see how something like this can be done.
